This dinner reflected two complementary forms of commitment:

That of CANAL+, a partner of French and European cinema since its creation in 1984, the leading partner of American studios (Paramount, Sony, Universal, Warner Bros) and platforms (Netflix, Apple+, HBO, Paramount+), which identifies and supports talent from their first works—from script development to distribution—both in France and internationally, notably through its subsidiary STUDIOCANAL, Europe's leading film and television studio.

And that of CHANEL, which maintains a historic relationship with cinema. This commitment takes many forms—from supporting production and film launches, to costume creation, backing festivals and iconic institutions, and restoring masterpieces to ensure the preservation and transmission of cinematic heritage.

As Official Partners of the Deauville Festival, CANAL+ and CHANEL reaffirm through this event their shared values: supporting creation, nurturing the talents shaping today's and tomorrow's cinema, and preserving and passing on the legacy of film history.
